About the presentation

“The aim of my presentation called Applying both Art and Science is to provide an insight into how my personal process of image creating and thoughts come together. The talk touches upon universal design tools used in art/design theory. Tools I found personally useful that helped me understand the psychology of art and visual presentation. I feel this insight has helped me engage the audience and promote my personal interest with evocative landscape and street/wildlife photography as well as hopefully revealing something deeper, richer and magical about the world around us.

The simple act of creating images is exciting for me as it often feels like a never-ending experiment, practicing and testing different photographic and post processing techniques with different outcomes.”
